Outside of Honolulu he saw and learned little, except what the lottery and palace rings and Claus Spreckels told him. He did make a brief junketing trip with Spreckels to Spreckels' plantation on the island of Mauri. He never went near the great island of Hawaii, which is nearly as large as the state of Connecticut and makes three-fifths of the entire country, where reside numerous and influential citizens, Americans, and other supporters of the provisional government. He neither saw nor made any investigation in the garden island of the group. Kauai, where reside some of the principal citizens of the country, and where American sentiments and annexation opinions among whites and natives are largely predominant. The royalists rings and circles and the hoodolum elements, whom the white adventurers largely control, are mainly in and around Honolulu, and these surroundings and influences constituted the chief factors on which Honolulu and the establishment of the propisional government and the country of the men of character in Honolulumerchants, bankers, lawyees, judges, clergymen, college presidents, teachers and responsible men of the islands who has read Blount's report observes how one-sided and superficial it is.

From this dispatch I quote the following:

"In the absence of any detailed information from you of the late disorders in the domestic control of Hawaii and the changes which have taken place in the official corps which have taken place in the official corps which have taken place in the official corps of that government, I am not able to give you other than general instructions, which may be communicated in substance to the commander of the vessels of this government in the waters of Hawaii, with whom well freally confer in order that much ernment in Hawaii. "In approving the views of the provisional government in favor of annexation, after that government had been recognized as the de facto government of Hawaii, I simply stand on lines marked out by a former democratic administration, with William L. Marcy Secretary of State. I hold in my hands a copy of an annexation treaty which was negotiated thirty-nine years ago. In 1854 Secretary Marcy, by the authority of President Pierce and his cabinet, authorized and instructed Commissioner Greeg to negotiate with the Hawaiian government a treaty of annexation, admitting Hawaii into the Union as a territory. Marcy's instructions authorized Commissioner Greeg to negotiate with the Hawaiian government a treaty of annexation, admitting Hawaii into the Union as a territory. "I do not think the present Hawalian government can long remain in the hands of the present rulers or under the control of the native inhabitants of these islands. • • • It seems to be inevitable that they must come under the control of this gov-

An Annexation Treaty That Failed. "The annexation treaty falled then because in the negotiations at Honolulu the amount had been increased from $100,000 to $300,000, for pensions, to the king and chiefs, and because the treaty as agreed upon at Honolulu admitted Hawaii as a state instead of a territory. This was not in accord with Marcy's instructions to Gregg, and was justly inadmissible by the government at Washington. The Hawaiian minister of foreign affairs was a canny Scotchman who loved power. Professing to be for annexation, he was sharp enough to insist in getting into the treaty draft what he could hardly have failed to know would cause its rejection at Washington. These supposed tactics of the Scotchman These supposed tactics of the scotchman are denied by some, who maintain that he sincerely favored annexation, and that he assented to the treaty provision requiring the admission of Hawaii as a state because of the strong fear of many of the American residents that territorial admission wight result in the introduction of sion might result in the introduction of African slavery in the islands. "Touching the clamor and misrepresenta-

were given to completely invalidate and disprove his charge against the provisional government, Capt. Wilse and myself. But I have other facts which show how ex parte and superficial was Blount's so-called investigation of Hawaiian affairs. Even had he been impartial and guarded by the single wish to arrive at the whole truth, the time he allowed himself for his work was much too short.

"He not only had most of his associations with and gave chief credence to the supporters of the fallen queen, but he confined himself to a limited field of observation. The island of Oahu, in which Honolulu is situated, is only one of the five or six islands which constitute the state of the fallen and dispersions.

"Secretary Marcy's instructions for anharcterions for the pay and 's instructions of July, 1887, to protect American life and property and to preserve public order in Hawaii, must seem to you, as they seem to me, more patriotic, more truly American, than the present attitude of Cleveland, Gresham and Blount toward the Hawaii of this date. I think you will agree with me in preferrion, of Andrew Jackson, William L. Marcy, William H. Seward, Ulysses S. Grant, and James G. Blaine, who followed the star of American destiny wherever it lighted the way and even the Americanism of Cleveland and Bayard in 1887, to the extraordinary course of Cleveland and Gresham in 1883, as to Hawaiian affairs. tion of Honolulu, running over the entire period named, showed that whether the whig statesmen, the democratic statesmen or the republican statesmen were in power, their views and policy were essentially the same. This holds true of President Cleveland and Secretary Bayard in their four years of service from 1885 to 1889. and after the concert they will be entertain This year Princeton boasts not only of the foot ball championship, but of having the finest musical organization of any college. The entire membership of the clubs is fifty, distributed among the three organizations, so that the Glee Club has twenty-five members, the Banjo Club eighteen, and the Mandolin Club twenty. The men are a fine-looking crowd and thoroughly representative of the college. Among the members are such athletes as Trenchard, captain of the foot bail team; Phil King, the famous quarter back; Mackenzie, captain of the base The entire membership of the clubs is fifty. "T. F.
